Title and general description	Cinnlínte: Saol an Iriseora Deaglán de Bréadún shares his insights on the highlights of his career as a journalist with The Irish Times and latterly with The Irish Sun. We get to meet the big players on the international and national stage – Yasser Arafat, Boris Yeltsin, Mikhail Gorbachev, Charles Haughey, Ian Paisley and Brian Cowen. Young reporters and students of journalism and media will find much of interest here, from the tenacity and professionalism required in the field, to the comprehensive backdrop he provides to those events within the State and in the wider world from the 1970s onwards that have shaped our lives in the modern era.
Editor	Deaglán de Bréadún is a well-known journalist and reporter. He was The Irish Times Northern Editor during the negotiations for the Good Friday Agreement and his coverage won the BT/IPR award for daily news journalist of the year. Other positions held on The Irish Times included Foreign Affairs Correspondent, Political Correspondent and Temporary Moscow Correspondent. He won an Oireachtas na Gaeilge journalism award for his work as the paper's Irish Language Editor. He left the paper in 2012 and spent a year after that as Local Radio Correspondent for the Houses of the Oireachtas Commission at Leinster House, before taking up an appointment as Political Editor of The Irish Sun. He is also a member of the Press Council of Ireland.
